

To the news desk,

You are receiving this letter as a direct question from a growing and extremely concerned group of Canadians, who want to express their disappointment for the lack of coverage of the events on Parliament Hill on Canada Day, and every subsequent day since regarding the occupation of the National War Memorial in Ottawa. This is another example of the breach of conduct Canadians feel subjected to by the overreaching bias and censorship invading all realms of news and media in this country. The social implications arising from subsidized, politically driven agendas within media, has broken the trust between mainstream media and the people. Canadians deserve better. Please accept the following press release for distribution as a human interest story, which has already connected to the hearts of millions of Canadians, compelling them to speak directly to you.

Press Release

For those who are unaware, thousands gathered on Parliament Hill on July 1st to be heard. The Canadian Revolution is here at the National War Memorial in Ottawa, to demand the Prime Minister of Canada, and all elected and selected officials who are all guilty of crimes and treason against the people of Canada step down. We are here to take a peaceful stand against the unlawful defacto governance of the people. We are exercising our rights on this sacred land with dedication and honour for all. With respect for those who have fallen in defence of our freedoms before us. The people not only have the right, but also the duty to stand and correct the unlawful defacto government. We are empowered by the truths that will protect us from the injustices and trespasses that are transpiring. We stand for freedom, and we will no longer be complacent as our rights and liberties are infringed upon. This is not just a protest, but a movement driven by people who seek justice and dejure governance, preserving the unalienable right to self determination.

Please direct all responses to info@thecanadianrevolution.org so we can address them in the most clear and appropriate manner.
